

What We Can Do For Business

Software Development

The days of time and cost consuming localization projects will soon be a thing of the past. Imagine a software localization project that would have taken many months to produce in just one additional language. With the Cognigenix Global Foundation Classes (CGF™), this project will take only a few days and can be produced and run in any and all languages simultaneously.

What can CogniGenix do for the software development industry? We can save you time and money as well as increase your presence in the global market. Your ROI will be realized within months, as language will no longer be a barrier.

Any Business Needing Document Translation Services

Many businesses today are faced with high translation costs and project deadlines that limit the amount of documents that can be translated on time and on budget. Human translators must be used to ensure accuracy and they are subject to availability and area of expertise. Because of these factors, most businesses are only able to translate a finite amount of documents.

With CogniGenix Machine Translation (CGMT™), the amount of documents translated need not be a function of the cost per word or the time it takes for each translation. CGMT allows a business unlimited document translations any time of day or night for one set price per language pair.

Any Business Needing a Multi-Lingual Web Site

Using current industry practices for localizing a web site into another language is a costly proposition for any business. Businesses are forced to hire out for this service often compromising the content and format of the original web site. Each new site in another language is often located on a different server and updated at different times by different engineers. The results are varied and the original intent is often lost.

With the CogniGenix Web Application (CGW™), any business needing a multi-lingual web site can have it in a matter of days with complete language parity in all language versions. The format is the same from language to language. Only one version of the site is required. This is a tremendous cost and time savings for any business.